Lesson 2 Activity 1

Scenario - Navigation Officer

You are the Navigation Officer on a flight from New York to Sydney. Due to an explosion on board your flight, your plane crash-landed somewhere in the Pacific Ocean. You managed to swim ashore to a deserted island, where you found five more people who suffered the same fate as you.

They are:

- A 52 year-old veteran seaman
- A critically injured 32 year-old man who will not survive after 3 days
- A 43 year-old woman who knows how to use stars for direction
- A 34 year-old male body-builder who suffers from sea-sickness
- A fisherman

Also washed ashore from the wreckage of the plane is an inflatable life-raft that could seat 2 people with two pedals. You also found some food supplies and drinkable water to last 3 people 3 days.

You remembered that the island you are in is 2 days away from main land by sea. You also know by memory the geographical features of the surrounding areas, including the other islands and its locations.

Since you exude a sense of confidence and authority, the other 5 survivors automatically look to you when it comes to decision making. What should you do to ensure the survival of everyone? Try applying the habit -Taking Responsible Risks.
Huang Na, an eight year old China schoolgirl went missing on Oct 10 2004 was found dead, stuffed into a box on Sunday. Her mother, Madam Huang Shuying, had returned to her hometown in Fujian, China for a short trip to visit a sick relative and left the girl with a friend, Mr Wu Yen Bin. The eight-year-old could not tag along as she had to study for her exams at Jin Tai Primary School. Mother and daughter have been staying with Mr Wu, also a China national, at a lodging house at the Pasir Panjang Wholesale Market, where he runs a fruit and vegetable import company.

On Oct 10, Huang Na left the lodging house for a phone booth 500m away and called her mother in China, "She told me to buy her a computerised English dictionary and a pair of sandals," said Madam Huang, recalling the last time she spoke to her child. Nobody has seen Huang Na since that day. Two days later, a frantic Madam Huang cut short her trip home and returned to Singapore. Madam Huang, 27, who came here with her daughter 18 months ago, is a "study mama" - one of more than 1,000 such China nationals who have brought their children to Singapore in the hope of giving them a better education.
